GERMANY FORCES RUSSIANS TO PAY A BIG INDEMNITY

Treaty Reported Signed Includes "Damages" Of Six Billion Marks

PROVINCES TAKEN

Russia Must Give Up Sovereignty Over Esthonia And Livonia

CAUCASUS GERMAN

Turkey Protests Against Berlin's Getting Fruits It Coveted

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Amsterdam, September 9.—A message from Berlin states that the supplementary treaties between Germany and Russia have been signed.

They provide for the appointment without delay of delimitation commissions with the provision of neutral zones.

Germany undertakes not to support the formation of independent Russian states while Russia renounces her sovereignty over Esthonia and Livonia and receives free harbor zones at Reval, Riga and Windau.

Germany retains the occupation of the Caucasus. Russia agrees to German recognition of the independence of Georgia and promises to supply Germany with a quarter of the oil supplies from Baku.

Russia pays Germany 6,000 million marks for indemnification of the losses of individual German subjects, subject to counter-claims, of which 1,500 millions is payable in five monthly instalments, partly gold and partly in notes; 1,000 million in merchandise spread over eighteen months; 2,500 millions in German bonds before December 31 and 1,000 million by subsequent agreement.

The Turkish press protests against the German arrangement regarding the Caucasus and Georgia and strongly criticises the fact that the treaty was concluded without consulting Turkey.

How To Make Subscriptions For Fourth Liberty Loan

Plans Maturing For Intensive Campaign To Open September 28 In Shanghai

Preparations for the next Liberty Loan campaign in Shanghai are steadily being made by the Executive Committee in charge and all is to be in readiness for a sharp, intensive drive which will be launched September 28. The campaign here will close on October 17, a few days before it ends in the United States so that time will be given to cable the result to Washington and secure Shanghai's allotment of the bonds.

This will be the fourth issue of Liberty Bonds. The first Liberty Bonds were placed on sale in America May 14, 1917. A minimum subscription of $2,000,000,000 was asked for. More than 4,000,000 individual subscriptions were received, totaling $3,035,226,850, or over 50 percent more than the amount asked. Americans in China took no part in this first loan.

A second Liberty Bond issue was offered October 1, 1917, subscriptions closing October 27. The offering of bonds was $3,000,000,000. The total subscriptions by more than 9 million subscribers amounted to $4,617,532,300, the issue being oversubscribed 54 percent. Few of these bonds were sold in China.

The third campaign for the sale of Liberty Bonds came to an end on May 4, 1918. The issue was for $4,000,000,000 and the subscriptions amounted to $4,170,000,000, from 17 million subscribers. Americans in China took an active part in this campaign with the result that sales amounting to $630,000 were made.

During the time that these Liberty Bonds were issued the United States raised by taxation about $4,000,000,000.

Per capita purchases of Liberty Bonds in the United States amount to about $118.

During the same period war taxes amounting to about $40 per capita have been paid.

How You Can Buy Liberty Bonds

(1) Payment in Local Currency.

Bonds may be purchased through local banks (for list of banks see advertisements in daily papers) and paid for in Mex. dollars or taels at a rate of exchange to be agreed upon between the purchaser and the bank. The bank will give the purchaser a receipt for the amount paid.

The purchaser will fill out an application for the bonds which will be forwarded to Washington by the bank. When the bonds are received in China they will be delivered to the purchaser under terms agreed upon at time of purchase.

(2) Insurance.

In addition to the purchase price of the bonds, the banks will charge a fee of Mex. $0.50 per G.$100 to cover cost of insurance.

(3) Payment by Cheque on bank in U. S.

Cheques on personal bank accounts in the United States will be accepted providing the cheques are issued by parties known to the bank.

(4) Purchases by Letter of Credit.

Holders of letters of credit issued by banks in the United States may pay for bonds by drawing against letter of credit for the face value of the bonds.

(5) Demand Draft.

Payments for bonds may be made by demand draft on banks in the United States, but the purchase should be made through the bank issuing the demand draft.

(6) Telegraphic Transfer.

Payment may also be made by telegraphic transfer on same terms as above but when using the T. T. of another bank the buyer must pay the telegraphic charge to the bank receiving the subscription.

(7) Deferred Payments.

If the subscriber does not care to pay cash in full for the bonds at the

BOLSHEVIKI ARROGANT IN REPLY TO LONDON

German Version Of Note Says British Diplomats Will Be Released Only On Conditions

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Amsterdam, September 9.—The Lokal Anzeiger states that Dora Kaplan, Lenin's assailant, has been executed.

According to German telegrams, Tchicherin, the Bolshevik Commissary for Foreign Affairs, in an impudent reply to the note presented by the British Government, states that the Soviet Government is prepared to exchange diplomats only if neutrals guarantee that Great Britain will grant the Bolshevik representative in London, Litvinoff, a safe-conduct to Russia. Mr. Lockhart, the British Consul-General at Moscow, and the other British subjects now in prison will then be permitted to leave.

Amsterdam, September 9.—A message from Petrograd states that it is officially announced that 512 persons have been shot up to the present as a reprisal for the murder of Uritzki, the Bolshevik Minister of the Interior.

The names of 121 hostages are published who will be shot in case of any fresh attempt on the lives of the Bolshevik leaders. They include five Grand Dukes, two members of the former Kerensky Ministry and prominent ex-officers.

Thirty-four big land owners and also the ex-Archimandrite of Moscow have been shot at Smorensk as a reprisal for the attack on Lenin.

Amsterdam, September 9.—According to messages from Moscow the counter-revolutionary movement continues to spread despite the drastic measures taken by the Bolsheviki. There is hardly any large town in Russia where a plot has not been discovered in connection with which numerous persons have been arrested. The movement apparently emanates from one center.

The Weather

Fine today. The maximum temperature yesterday was 84.2 and the minimum 72, the figures for the corresponding day last year being 81.5 and 68.6.

DR. WU TING-FANG DENIES CANTON CUSTOMS REPORT

Refutes Story That Military Government Intends Seizure; Peace Talk Discounted

Reuter's Pacific Service

Canton, September 10.—Wu Ting-fang has requested Reuters Agency to deny the report that the Canton Military Government intends taking over the Customs forcibly, adding that the enemy invented this malicious statement to injure the Constitutional cause.

Tsen Chun-hsuan also denies that here has been an agreement for peace based on a division of political offices, charging that the improper election challenges the South to further warfare instead of peace.

OPENING OF WANHSIEN AS TREATY PORT ASKED

Foreign Residents Of Growing River Town Urge Importance To Trade Interests

Reuter's Pacific Service

Peking, September 10.—Since the establishment of the Customs at Wanhsien, which function under Chungking, trade has developed considerably at that important river-side city, the Wanhsien-Chengtu trade route being easier though longer than the Chungking-Chengtu route, while Wanhsien is the natural outlet and inlet for the rich districts of east Szechuen. Foreigners, with the increased trade, desired to own land and establish hongs there and requested the Legations to ask China to open the town as a treaty port. China has not complied, pointing out that the British Commercial Treaty of 1902 provided for such opening but was never put in force. The British Legation has pointed out that that was not the fault of the foreigners. The Legation has not demanded the opening of Wanhsien as a treaty port but has merely requested it, pointing out that the opening of the town to foreign trade will serve Chinese interests no less than those of foreigners as it will increase the importance, prosperity and trade of Wanhsien, which hitherto has been unable to compete on an equal footing with treaty ports situated less favorably.

EUGENE CH'EN EXPECTED TO BE IN COURT TODAY

Former Editor Of Shanghai Gazette To Appear On Libel Suit Summons, Is Report

The case of Mr. Judah I. Ezra against Mr. Eugene Ch'en for alleged libels appearing in the Shanghai Gazette in connection with the baseball scandal is expected to come up in the Mixed Court today and it is presumed Mr. Ch'en, who apparently did not leave on the s.s. China, will appear. Mr. G. H. Wright, of Messrs. Hanson, McNeill, Jones and Wright, has been retained as counsel for Mr. Ch'en.

An attempt to serve a security summons on Mr. Ch'en yesterday led first to an unavailing search aboard the China Mail steamship China, on which he had booked passage, and finally to shipwreck when a second journey to Woosung was undertaken.

The security summons, practically equivalent to a warrant, was issued in chambers at the Mixed Court yesterday afternoon. It was after 4 o'clock by the time the counter-signatures had been secured and Sergeant W. C. Woodfield of the Mixed Court staff caught the 5 o'clock tender to make immediate service of the summons. Mr. Ch'en was not found on board the China, however, and the police officer returned to Shanghai at about 8:30 p.m. Later it was determined to make a second search of the steamship and a private lunch, the Mei Foo IV, belonging to the Standard Oil Co., was taken from the jetty for the trip. There were aboard Sergeant Woodfield, Mr. A. Krisel, a lawyer, and a reporter for THE CHINA PRESS, who watched the proceedings on both trips. The launch reached Woosung about midnight and there in the darkness crashed into the breakwater and shortly afterward sank. The search party reached Woosung and returned to Shanghai yesterday morning by train.

Russian-Japanese Company Is Formed To Develop Siberia

Will Share Capital Equally And Establish Head Office At Harbin

Reuter's Pacific Service

Tokio, September 10.—The organisation of the Russo-Japanese Economic Corporation for commercial and industrial developments in Siberia has been practically completed. The Russian side is represented by twelve Russian capitalists, and the Japanese by the Bank of Chosen, the Oriental Development Company and the Sino-Japanese Industrial Company. The capital will be between ten and twenty million roubles, which will be shared equally by the Russian and Japanese interests. It is believed that the head office will be in Harbin. The formal organisation of the Corporation is expected within a month.

Hertling To Resign As Result Of Defeat, Copenhagen Reports

Great Political Changes Impending In Germany And Austria To Placate People

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, September 9.—A telegram from Copenhagen states that, owing to the increasing nervousness among the people of Germany, important political changes are approaching, including the resignation of (? the Imperial Chancellor). The Vossische Zeitung mentions that Dr. Solf, Herr Erzberger and Herr Scheidemann are mentioned as possible successors. The Vossische Zeitung adds that there is no doubt that the Austrian Cabinet will resign shortly.

GERMAN REPLY FEEBLE TO BRITISH 'SUB' EXPOSE

Makes Only Vague Answer To Publication Of Captured Captains' Names

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Amsterdam, September 10.—The German reply to the publication by the British Government of the names of the commanders of 150 submarines which have been captured confines itself to vague references to inaccuracies, the only specific inaccuracy mentioned being a wrong description of the rank of some of the submarine commanders. Otherwise the reply takes refuge behind the plea that nothing further can be said without revealing important secrets. It concludes with the usual warning against pessimism.

Serious Food Riots In Austrian Town

Hundreds Of Women Plunder Shops And Martial Law Is Declared

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Zurich, September 9.—According to a severely censored message from Vienna there has been a serious food riot at Villach, in Carinthia, in which hundreds of women plundered the butchers' shops, the police and military for the time being powerless. Martial law has been proclaimed there.

ALLIES CONTINUE GOOD LOCAL GAINS NEAR ST. QUENTIN

French Drawing Up On South And British On North

FOUR MILES AWAY

Pause In General Advance Believed To Be Only Temporary

NEARING LA FERE

Foch Conducting Outflanking Movement; Laon Under Guns' Fire

THE BATTLE IN BRIEF

Although the general advance has been at least temporarily stemmed, the Allies are still making appreciable gains in local areas, principally north and south of St. Quentin.

The French are now less than four miles from St. Quentin, their patrol are close to La Fere and Laon is under the fire of their guns. They have taken Eitreillers, Roupy, Grand Seraucourt and Gibercourt, a gain of from one and a half to three miles, all south of St. Quentin. Also they are outflanking La Fere, the capture of which is more than probable.

North of St. Quentin the British also have advanced in places two miles, especially between Gouzeaucourt and Epehy.

There has been severe fighting in the Laffaux Ravines, which command the ridge to the Chemindes-Dames, with the advantage to the French.

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Paris, September 9, 9:25 p.m.—The Allies have now reached he important front facing the Hindenburg Line. The enemy is actually seeking shelter inside the positions he used two months ago as starting points for his attack.

A slight pause is probable at certain parts of the front. The enemy should venture on local counter-attacks but a general reaction by the Germans seems improbable owing to lack of time and the men necessary.

Defense Is Formidable

The question is for the Allies the capture of the successive and formidable organisations miles deep established during the last two years behind the water lines on which von Ludendorff is now bound to bury himself and will attempt to resist. But the Germans cannot defend the Crozat Canal as it has been crossed by General Humbert, the railway junction at La Fere seems ripe to fall into our hands while the Forest of St. Gobain, the most powerful bastion of von Ludendorff's defense, is outflanked on the west by General Mangin's advance along the Oise. Further east von Ludendorff is attacking furiously in an endeavor to hold the Aisne front. Yesterday one of General Mangin's divisions eastward of that front broke through five German divisions and General Berthelot's terrible pressure north of the Vesle enables one to think that the Germans will retreat there as on the rest of the front.

Battle Scene May Shift

Should the advance of the Allies slacken at certain points, it is certain that it will start again elsewhere. Some movements of troops will be needed but no regathering of the Allied forces will be necessary as the bulk of them have been following the vanguard methodically and closely. Obviously Marshal Foch will not think himself obliged to attack at the very point where the enemy, in expectation, has garnered the greater part of his forces and material to sustain the shock of the Allies.

Paris, September 10.—Military experts are of opinion that although the rate of the Allied advance is slackening this in no way implies stagnation and further surprises are to be expected.

The French capture of the ancient Fort-de-Liez further menaces La Fere, which it dominates at a distance of five kilometers.

There are still 300 nests of machine-guns hidden in Lens.

The floods west of Cambrai are four feet deep, which hampers the operations of our tanks.

Laon is now under the fire of the French guns.

Cross Crozat Canal

Paris, September 9.—The official communique issued this afternoon reports:

North of the Somme we increased our progress east of Avesnes in the direction of Clastres and occupied Lamotte Farm.

Our elements crossed the Crozat Canal opposite Liez.

Between the Oise and the Aisne there was violent artillerying and reactions between the enemy infantry during the night. Two strong German counter-attacks in the region of Laffaux were repulsed. We took eighty prisoners belonging to five different regiments.

In Champagne we carried out a raid in the region of Mont Sans Nom and took prisoners.

A German raid west of Auberive failed.

Etreillers And Roupy Fall

The official communique issued this evening reports:

Our troops today made fresh advances at different points of the battlefront.

Westward of St. Quentin we captured Etreillers and Roupy.

Beyond the Crozat Canal we captured Grand-Seraucourt, Clastres, Montescourt-Lizerolles and Remigny. We occupied Hill 103 southwards of Montescourt.

Northwards of the Oise we occupied Essigny-le-Grand station, Hill 117, Fort-de-Liez and the woods northwest of Canlers Farm and Red Farm were captured.

Southwards of the Oise the brick works and station at Servais were carried.

We advanced in the region north of Laffaux and in the region of Glennes between the Aisne and the Vesle.

Gibercourt Is Captured

Paris, September 10.—The official communique issued this afternoon reports:

East of Crozat Canal we captured Gibercourt and advanced in the direction of Hinacourt and Essigny-le-Grand.

South of the Ailette we beat back two counter-attacks in the region of Nanteuil-la-Fosse.

Enemy raids in the Argonne and Vosges were repulsed.

British Also Advance South of St. Quentin

London, September 9.—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig reports this evening:

Early this morning advanced detachments of English and New Zealand troops attacked and carried the German positions on the high ground between Peiziere and Havrincourt Wood after sharp fighting in which we repulsed heavy counter-attacks with loss to the enemy. We gained the old British trench-lines on the ridge overlooking Gouzeaucourt, capturing Gouzeaucourt Wood. On the left of this attack other English troops successfully advanced our line in the eastern portions of Havrincourt Wood. We captured a number of prisoners in these operations.

We repulsed attacks against the posts recently established westward of La Bassee.

The weather is wet and stormy.

Aviation.—Our aeroplanes carried out their work with difficulty owing to rainstorms and wind.

We dropped five tons of bombs during the day time. There was no flying during the night.

The enemy's activity was slight. We brought down five enemy machines and drove down two out of control. No British machines are missing.

A German official communique reports:

Strong enemy attacks against the Gouzeaucourt-Epehy line failed with heavy losses.

Between the Ailette and the Aisne an attack made by the enemy in close formation was repulsed along the whole front with sanguinary losses.

Enemy Counter-attack Beaten

London, September 10.—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig reports this morning:

The enemy launched a second counter-attack against our new positions westward of Gouzeaucourt but was completely repulsed.

Our line advanced during the night southward of Havrincourt.

We also made progress northeastward of Neuve Chapelle and westward and northwards of Armentieres.

A German official communique reports:

The enemy has captured minor trench sections northward of Mercken and northeastward of Ypres.

An enemy thrust against Gouzeaucourt and Epehy was repulsed.

There has been great artillery activity between the Ailette and the Aisne, where violent and oft repeated attacks broke down.

Get Close To St. Quentin

London, September 9.—Reuter's agency learns that between the Scarpe and the Oise we are now attacking Gouzeaucourt and also hold the western edge and part of the northern edge of Epehy, while our patrols have entered Vendelles and Vermand.

The French are less than four miles from St. Quentin while their cavalry patrols are close to La Fere. The German retreat is slowing down as the Siegfried line is approached and rapid movement is apparently terminating on this part of the front for the time being.

Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters reported today:

To the south we have reached a line eastwards of the villages of Trefcon, Pezuilly, Flechin, and Bernes. We were in Roisel, from which point our line ran along the Roisel-Villers-Faucon Railway, we occupy Faucon and also Saulcourt and Guyencourt.

Further north we had carried a spur southeast of Heudicourt, gained useful ground north of the village and were in Dessart Wood between Fins and Gouzeaucourt. The Germans are reported to be trailing out of Heudicourt, near which we have captured Spoil Heap which figured prominently in the battle of Cambrai last November, securing prisoners and machine-guns.

East of Wulverghem an enemy storming party gained our trenches but was driven back with considerable loss.

Fires In Douai

Fires were observed in Douai during the day.

Among our prisoners are eight men recently released from captivity in Russia.

A captured order signed by General von Schultheim directs that no dug-outs with more than eight steps are to be used. These deep shelters are one of the great features of the Hindenburg Line.

This morning we have made satisfactory progress between Gouzeaucourt and Peiziere.

Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters reported this evening:

Our attack this morning between Gouzeaucourt and Epehy was completely successful. A considerable resistance was encountered from strong pockets of Germans with machine-guns. Our attack partook of the nature of a reconnaissance in force by strong skirmishing patrols. As a result we carried Gouzeaucourt Wood, on the high ground northwest of the town, a point of vantage of substantial tactical value. This carries our line nearly straight from the southeast corner of Havrincourt Wood, the majority of which is now in our possession.

The weather is wet and stormy.

Fight For Chemin-des-Dames

Reuter's correspondent at American headquarters reports:

This morning between the Ailette and the Aisne the resistance of the enemy is stronger, indicating the arrival of fresh troops.

The Laffaux ravines yesterday were the scene of sanguinary fighting. Their importance is that they give access along the ridge to Chemin-des-Dames.

At Celles-sur-Aisne, at the southeastern angle of the same group of hills, the Germans attacked furiously, revealing an abundance of artillery of all calibers is now concentrated at this danger spot in the defense of St. Gobain Massif.

In view of the difficulty of making progress in this region, more success is likely to attend our outflanking movement towards La Fere, but, in any case, this counter-attacking is all to our advantage.

Anniversary Of Marne Is Celebrated At Front

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Paris, September 8.—The anniversary of the first battle of the Marne was celebrated in an impressive manner on the battlefield itself. Allied troops, including troops from the Dominions, participated.

Germans Would Ban Allied Communiques

Apparently Inspired Campaign Under Way To Forbid Their Publication

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Amsterdam, September 9.—A number of the leading German newspapers are voicing similar, and apparently inspired protests, against the publication of enemy communiques.

Speaking at Dresden, the Saxon Minister of the Interior emphasised the present need, because the Fatherland is in danger, of all parties from pacifists to annexationists to draw closer together on the policy of holding out. He said "The present is the hardest time of all because our old courage and old resolute spirit seem to be beginning to waver."

General Freytag von Loringhoven, after declaring that Germany had been in much more serious situations, says that the positions the Germans occupied prior to Marshal Foch's counter-offensive were the result of an abortive German offensive and therefore unsuitable for defense, the aim of which is the effective economising of forces, as the positions were not properly consolidated.

He concludes with the customary appeal to the German people to stand fast and trust the army.

HAIG THANKS HIS ARMY IN ORDER OF THE DAY

Reviews Results Of Glorious Month Of Victory Over Enemy

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, September 10.—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig has issued the following Order of the Day to the troops in France:

A month has now passed since the British armies, after successfully withstanding all the enemy's attacks, once more took the offensive in their turn.

In that short space of time, by a series of brilliant and skilfully executed actions, our troops have repeatedly defeated the same German armies whose vastly superior number compelled our retreat last Spring.

What has happened on the British front has happened also on the front of our Allies.

Less than six months after the launching of the great German offensive designed to cut the Allied front in two, the Allied armies everywhere today are advancing victoriously side by side over the same battlefield on which, by the courage and steadfastness of their defense, they broke the assaults of the enemy.

Yet more has been done. Already we have passed beyond our old battle lines of 1917 and made a wide breach in the enemy's strongest defenses.

In this glorious accomplishment all ranks of all arms and services of the British armies in France have borne their part in a very worthy and most honorable manner. The capture of 75,000 prisoners and 750 guns in our weeks' fighting speaks for the magnitude of your effort and the magnificence of your achievement.

My thanks are due to all ranks of the fighting forces for their indomitable spirit in defense and their boldness in attack, and to all Commanders and their Staff Officers under whose able direction such great results were attained, and to all those whose unsparing labors behind the actual fighting line contributed essentially to our common success. To have commanded this splendid army, which in a time of great crisis has so nobly done its duty, fills me with pride.

We have passed through many dark days together. Please God, these never will return. The enemy has now spent his effort and I rely confidently on each one of you to turn to full advantage the opportunity which your skill, courage and resolution has created.

TUESDAY IS ANNIVERSARY OF BALBOA'S DISCOVERY

Sighting Of Pacific By Portuguese Explorer Will Be Celebrated In Many Places

September 17, next Tuesday, is Balboa Day. Four hundred and five years ago that date Vasco Nunez de Balboa, from the top of a high hill in Panama, sighted the Pacific, though the date was September 25 by the calendar then in usage.

Balboa Day will be celebrated in many cities along the Pacific coast of America, in Honolulu, probably in a number of Pacific countries and possibly will be observed by a luncheon here. The Pan-Pacific Association, of which Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane is president, is active in the movement for observation of the day and a letter has been received by Consul-in-Charge N. T. Johnson from the Pan-Pacific Union in Honolulu suggesting that Shanghai join.

The anniversary will be featured in Washington by Secretary Lane's presentation to President Wilson of the flags of the Pacific nations, with a request that the President accept the Honorary Presidency of the Pan-Pacific Union.

Balboa Day, or Pan-Pacific Day, first so named by the late Queen Liliuokulani, was observed for the first time in 1915 at the old royal palace in Honolulu. Since then the date has been more or less noted and was the occasion of quite a considerable celebration by various organisations in San Francisco last year. It is the hope of the organisers that the Pan-Pacific Union will eventually be taken over by the Pacific nations, as the Pan-American Union was by North and South America.

New President Announces He Will Assume Post If Cabinet Not Interfered With

Mr. Hsu Shih-chang, the new President, has announced that he will assume the office on October 10, according to Chinese reports. The conditions under which he will take over the presidential duties are that the military authorities in the provinces will refrain from interfering with his Cabinet and that an armistice be declared immediately for peace negotiations.

Posthumous honors for the late Mr. Tang Hua-lung, former Minister of Education and of the Interior assassinated in Victoria, B. C., were decided upon at the Cabinet meeting Tuesday. The sum of $10,000 will be bestowed upon his family and his life history will be published in the National Records of Great Men. Several memorial services have been arranged by Mr. Liang Chi-chao and Mr. Ling Chang-ming in his honor. The son of the deceased, Tang Bei-sung, is now studying at the Tsing Hua College, Peking.

A Hongkong telegram states that Tuchun Li Hao-chi of Fukien has fled from Foochow in view of the approaching fall of the provincial capital.

Peking Government Shaken By New Menace Of South

Fukien And Chekiang Give Indications Of Going Over To Canton Government

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, September 7.—Whilst the main interest here is still the vice-presidential election, the uncertainties of which are as numerous and unexplorable as ever, two other matters are claiming some share of public attention, and these are the attitude taken by one of the groups in Parliament and the progress of the campaign in Fukien.

The campaign in Fukien is being watched not so much for its strategic as for its political significance. Strategically the campaign is going against the Government. Changchow has fallen to the southerners, Amoy railway station was yesterday reported as occupied by them, and today it is becoming evident that Amoy itself is gradually being surrounded. The Tuchun of Fukien has acknowledged to the Government the receipt of 600,000 yen, paid to him by a Japanese bank on Government's account, probably a loan arranged on terms highly advantageous to the creditors. It now remains to see what will happen to the Government forces, and to the money.

There is a growing belief here that Fukien is deliberately being passed into the hands of the southern armies, and that when the appropriate moment comes it will declare its independence. There is also a growing suspicion that Chekiang is preparing to do the same thing. The Tuchun of Chekiang has informed the Government that his province is over-run with agents of the south and that he cannot send troops to assist the Government troops in Fukien. The question that many are asking is whether this means that the two provinces are just about to declare their allegiance to the south. If so, then the Government is faced with a very serious problem, for it will have practically the whole of the south Yangtsze provinces against it; for the attitude of the tuchuns of Kiangsu, Kiangsi and Hunan is so decidedly pacific that they may be reckoned on the side of the south. The Government could not of course put up a fight against a combination like this, and apparently only a change of Cabinet and of policy can be of the slightest service, and it is doubtful whether even these changes will not have come too late, for the definite declaration of the south that there has been no understanding about accepting Mr. Hsu Shih-chang as President and that "no self-respecting man" could accept the presidency from the northern parliament has shaken a good deal both of the self-complacency that was fairly generally here, and of the foundation of hope on which disinterested observers were building. It was so generally believed that an understanding on vital points had been effected by Mr. Liang Shih-yi whilst on his recent southern tour that the southern declaration has blown all confidence sky-high.

At the same time, there are signs of a revolt in parliament itself. Messrs. Chi Chung-yin, Hwang Chwan and Lan Kung-wu, members of the Chinpu ang (now known as the Yenchihuhui) have distinguished themselves by being the first members of the new Parliament to address an interpellation to the Government. They are acting on the maxim that it is the business of an opposition to oppose, and they regard themselves as the opposition because the present Cabinet contains no representatives of their party.

It will be remembered that the Tuan Cabinet immediately preceding this was a coalition in which the Chinputang was represented. Absence of representation appears, in Chinputang judgment, to justify an attitude of opposition, and the first opposition is being made on well chosen ground. The interpellations addressed to the Government consist of three important questions: (1) Whether the various Japanese loans contracted during the last twelve months have been made entirely on account of national necessity, and if so whether the Government is prepared to submit details of these loan agreements to the House of Representatives, of which the three interpellators are members, for information, discussion and approval—or disapproval; (2) whether the Government is prepared to publish the text of the Sino-Japanese Military Conventions, or to give any indication whether the texts already published in the foreign and Chinese press may be taken as substantially representing the agreements reached; (3) whether the Government has any definite policy towards the southwest other than attempting to crush the southwestern provinces by mere military force.

In each interpellation the interpellators make it distinctly clear, if the language they use is to be accepted at its face value, that they do not wish to embarrass the Government; they only ask for information for the House itself and not for general publication, and they are very respectful towards the Government. In fact, they are dangerously polite; and that is what the Government does not relish about them. No day has yet been fixed for the answering of the interpellations, but they are attracting widespread interest already and are regarded as the first sign of independence in the new Parliament. That is how the outside world looks upon them; the Government is said to regard them as the first sign of revolt. The Chinpu ang members are not numerous enough to dominate Parliament, but they are numerous enough to cause anxiety to the Government, to be a permanent thorn in the flesh. We shall see what we shall see.

ANAEMIA MEANS THIN BLOOD

Correct it in the Early Stages

In no disease is delay or neglect more dangerous than in anæmia, or poverty of the blood. It is common in young girls, and in persons who are overworked or run down by the heat. Anæmia makes its approach in so stealthy a manner that it is often well developed before its presence is recognised, and yet pale lips and checks, dark lines round the eyes, and a feeling of exhaustion on rising in the morning or after any light exertion, should give a clear warning to victims.

But taken in time there is a specific, a tonic medicine, which increases the number of red blood corpuscles, thus enabling the blood to carry the life-giving oxygen to all the tissues of the body. Dr. Williams' pink pills have had unbounded success in the treatment of this stubborn disease because of this wonderful property. The correction of anæmic conditions by Dr. Williams' pink pills is as certain as anything in medical science.

If you are suffering from impoverished blood you cannot afford to wait another day before giving Dr. Williams' pink pills a thorough trial. Go to any druggist and obtain a supply, or send $1.50 for a bottle ($8 for 6) to the China Office of the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

The Rough Road

The Rough Road. By William J. Locke. John Lane Company. $1.50 (gold) net.

It is into the mouth of Mlle. Jeanne Boissiere, the young French girl "with her tragic face, her tragic history, and her steadfast soul," that Mr. Locke puts the sentence which in a way epitomises his new novel, "the great heroes who have made themselves . . . from little dogs of no account." And the story is the story of one of these, of one who was not a "ready-made" hero by the grace of God, but a very weak and poor little dog, indeed, who in the great war fought for and won his soul. James Marmaduke Trevor of Denby Hall, only child of elderly parents, was brought up by his widowed mother exactly like a toy Pom. She had a pet and entirely baseless belief that he was delicate, and not one single thing of all the many which delight the heart of the ordinary boy would she permit him to do. So naturally those other boys, and especially his harum-scarum cousin Oliver, teased him and made merciless fun of him; Oliver it was who gave him that nickname of "Doggie" which clung to him all his life. But because he had never known any existence other than that of a toy Pom, and because his home was in Durdlebury, sleepiest of sleepy cathedral towns, twenty miles from the nearest railroad, he was very well contented with himself and with the life he led. Presently he became engaged, very much as a matter of course, to his cousin Peggy, the daughter of the charming, courtly old Dean of Durdlebury. Then came the war, and before long "something kicked him over the brink and sent him sprawling into the thick of it." The wealthy young man who objected to playing tennis because it made him so unpleasantly warm, whose great pride was his collection of little china dogs, and who was much perturbed when the manicurist missed her weekly visit, became a private soldier, a "Tommy" fighting in the ranks with all sorts and kinds of men, in places and under conditions which would once have seemed to him unendurable. What he learned, and how a certain fine sense of honor, an innate devotion to truth which he had never been without, helped him to make his way along "The Rough Road" of the Tommy, makes up a large portion of the book.

He is admirably drawn, this "little Doggie Trevor," and though he is at the end of the book a very different person from the effeminate fop to whom we are introduced in the beginning, the metamorphosis is so gradual and so well worked out that it carries full conviction. Moreover, the author wins for him, and this from the very first, a certain sympathy, a sympathy touched with contempt, perhaps, but sympathy nevertheless, by showing how the worst of his faults sprang from his education and environment, how little chance he had to be any other than what he was. So by the time he is overwhelmed by the "Great Disgrace," which half kills him, the reader is entirely prepared to like and to sympathise with him. He makes good; nor is he the only one whom the war changes for the better. Oliver, the cocky and domineering, develops into "the typical officer, trusted and beloved by his men," and Phineas MacPhail—but for Phineas MacPhail and his history the reader must go to the book itself. One of those educated semi-wastrels Mr. Locke delights in portraying, one not entirely unrelated to "The Beloved Vagabond" and to "Fortinbras, Marchande de Bonheur," though somewhat more credible than either, to attempt to describe him would be fair neither to Mr. Locke nor to the prospective reader.

Of women the book has two, Peggy and Jeanne, the one an English girl, sheltered from the war until it comes to her in the guise of sudden bereavement, the other a French bourgeoise, who when she first appears upon the scene has already experienced many of its worst horrors, already learned that "no German is a human being." She is very tenderly and very finely drawn, this slender girl in black with the eyes which were always seeing ghosts, who to Doggie presently "personified the heroic womanhood of France." She had suffered, and suffered terribly, but she never lost her splendid courage. We see her in the kitchen of the old house at Frelus, in whose barn Doggie and several of his mates were billeted, grave and gracious, old in tragic experience, but a girl in years and with some of the girlishness still left in her, dowered with much French practicality and common sense, one who, knowing the splendors and the terrors of the war, "had pierced to the heart of its mysteries"—a noble and lovable figure.

The central character of the book, however, is Doggie, and with but a very few brief interludes it is he whose experiences we follow. These so sharply contrasted experiences are vividly described. We get the very "feel" of Durdlebury, the stately and beautiful and unchanging; we know it as well as though we had been there, and know, too, the little French village behind the lines, the camp to which Doggie first went, the hospital through whose open windows came the breath of the sea. And we get a very vivid glimpse of the army as it looks to a Tommy. For while Mr. Locke has often and justly been accused of using rose color far too extensively, in their picture he has been chary of that perilous tint. Doggie's experiences were, many of them, anything but pleasant; and yet he found his first real happiness, his first real friendships, there in the trenches, despite the mud and the rats, the awful stench, the vermin, and the ever-present threat of agony and death. There he met men "compared with whom the rotten, squealing heroes of Homer were a horde of cowardly savages," and there he began to see, though indistinctly, something of that "men's work in England" which would be his to do, should he survive.

It has been said that a reader can get no more out of a book than he takes to it; with perhaps a qualifying clause or two, that phrase might be applied to life in general and the war in particular. Those who, themselves mean and sordid, seek only the sordid and the mean, the ugly and degrading, the reversions to the brute, will assuredly find these, and these only. But clearer, saner eyes, while not blind to them, can see far more, and it is well for us when with those clearer, saner eyes there is also the power to reproduce on paper that which has been seen. One may, if one chooses, read Mr. Locke's new novel merely for amusement; it is an interesting story, with a well-developed plot. But it is more than that; for, restraining his tendency to indulge in the grotesque and the extravagant, he has given here an account of how some very real people passed through the crucible of the war and came forth fine gold.

LOVE ETERNAL

Love Eternal. By H. Rider Haggard. Longmans, Green and Co. $1.50 (gold) net.

The name of Rider Haggard has become so closely associated with a certain type of story that we open a new volume of his in conscious expectation of finding therein an absorbing account of some strange and barbarous, or at the most half-civilised, peoples, with adventures and hairbreadth escapes, graphically related, and that perhaps, by our dear old friend Allan Quatermain himself. Consequently this new novel, "Love Eternal," is a good deal of a surprise, so different is it from those other, well-remembered tales. The scene is laid almost entirely in England and Switzerland, instead of in Africa; the war provides the means of bringing about the denouement, but is manifestly used simply as a convenient method of doing so. Yet, while "Love Eternal" can scarcely be called a war story, it is essentially of, though not about, the war. For, unless we are very greatly mistaken, it is to that quickened interest in things unseen, in questions both of the spiritual and supernatural, which has been one of the results of the upheaval of the past four years, that it owes its birth.

Since the outbreak of the war reports of mysterious visions, tales of how those already "gone west" appeared to relatives or friends and perhaps talked with them, have multiplied rapidly. Moreover, the theory of reincarnation seems to be taking a firm hold on not a few writers, as providing the most plausible explanation for certain phenomena, and especially for that swift, inexplicable love or loathing which occasionally springs up on the instant between those who, so far as they know, have never met or heard of each other before, and have no reason for feeling any sensation other than indifference, or at the most a very mild interest. It is with these ideas and questions and the author's point of view regarding them that "Love Eternal" is principally concerned.

The keynote of the book is struck, struck clearly and distinctly, in the very first paragraph: "More than thirty years ago two atoms of the eternal Energy sped forth from the heart of it we call God, and incarnated themselves in the human shapes that were destined to hold them for a while;" and then follows almost immediately the suggestion that perhaps these two atoms "did but repeat an adventure, or many, many adventures." One of them, destined to be known in this life as Godfrey Knight, arrived some six months before the other, who was called Isobel Blake. The families into which they were born lived near together, in a little place in Essex, called Monk's Acre. There was a beautiful old church at Monk's Acre, the "Abbey Church," and in the chancel there were the tombs of a knight who had died on the field of Crecy in 1346 and of his wife, Philippa.

Though never absolutely stated, it is very clearly intimated throughout the book that of this knight and lady Godfrey and Isobel were the reincarnations. Between them, from the very first, there was a remarkable, irresistible attraction; totally unalike in tastes, temperament and character, they, nevertheless, belonged to each other, and of this fact they were both conscious—Isobel, the radical and truth-seeker, who revolted from religion as presented to her by the mean and bigoted Mr. Knight, no less than Godfrey, the dreamer and mystic. It is this love of theirs, and Isobel's final renunciation of her creed of extinction and acceptance of a belief in immortality, a belief which comes to her entirely through her conviction that such a love cannot die which forms the groundwork of the book. But other forces enter into the history of Godfrey and Isobel, for Godfrey is a medium, possessed of the powers of clairvoyance and clairaudience, and while still less than 20 he meets and falls more or less into the power of a little group of spiritualists, and especially of a certain terrible old woman named Mme. Riennes. This Mme. Riennes, by the way, reminds one just a trifle of the fearsome hag who placed so important a part in "King Solomon's Mines." From the evil spell she has cast over him he is rescued by his delightful tutor, Pasteur Boiset, as quaint and lovable a character as one could wish to meet.

But, indeed, the character drawing is practically all well done. The pasteur's wife and daughter, slightly sketched, are yet altogether real; then there is the pathetic Helen Ogilvy—who for some strange reason is at first called Ethel—with her longing for knowledge of her dead lover; the narrow-minded, contemptible, and entirely self-complacent Mr. Knight, dear old Mrs. Parsons, the housekeeper, and several other cleverly portrayed people of different kinds. Godfrey the author has succeeded in keeping human and likeable, while Isobel, the direct and fearless, is in many ways admirable, both as girl and woman. We accept these two; but not for one moment do we accept the resolve which kept them apart for ten years as anything save a device of the author. Godfrey, the mystic, might perhaps have taken such an oath, but not the more practical Isobel. Indeed, strange as it may seem, the weak point of the book lies in the construction and development of the plot. For instance, Godfrey's relations with the spiritualist, and especially with Mme. Riennes, never seem really to have very much to do with the case, dwelt upon at length though they are, while Helen Ogilvy's intervention during that perilous moment on the Alps seems a somewhat detached incident. Throughout the novel, indeed, the reader never altogether losses a sense of unfulfillment of things taken up and not carried on. This does not mean that the book is uninteresting; far from it. The reader's attention is held, the glimpses of the war in those early days when Godfrey was one of that immortal band of heroes to whom we owe so immeasurable a debt, the "contemptible little English army," are well done, and there is much that is both touching and beautiful in the depiction of the love—love stronger far than death—between Isobel and Godfrey. And the author's point of view, with its acceptance of demonology and of a personal devil—"there is a being, not human, that hates us individually and collectively," he declares—is by no means the least interesting part of it all.

ALLIED HELP IN SIBERIA STILL URGENTLY NEEDED

Czech Officer Says Situation Is Serious Despite Control Of Railway

Reuter's Pacific Service

Harbin, September 10.—General Horvath with his staff arrived here yesterday and are leaving for Vladivostok today at eleven o'clock.

General Gaida, the Czech leader, is expected here this afternoon.

In an interview the Czech doctor Girsa, who is returning to Vladivostok from Oloviannaya, declared that the help of the Allies in Siberia is still most urgent. Bolshevism has by no means been destroyed and the situation, despite the fact that the Trans-Siberian line is in the hands of the Czechs, is still most serious and energetic action should take place immediately.

According to reliable information General Gaida met General Horvath most cordially and, in a short speech, expressed admiration and gratitude to General Horvath for openly taking steps against the Bolsheviki in the past when no movement had started.

Vladivostok, September 10.—The ceremony of returning their arms to the disarmed local Volunteer Corps took place this afternoon in the presence of General Knox and the British Town-Major.

The arms were blessed by a priest and handed over to the Corps who, after an impressive choral service, defiled through the dense throng of assembled townsfolk. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed.

This act of restoration is greatly appreciated by the middle and upper classes and will contribute to promote confidence and goodwill between the Allies and the Russians.

Harbin, September 10.—Following an order issued by the local authorities, the President and Members of the Strikers' Committee were arrested and put in prison. This measure appears to have helped better than any discussions for the majority of the railway employes have already returned to their posts and it is expected that normal traffic will be renewed on the whole line this evening.

Tokio, September 10.—A contingent of Japanese cavalry and General Semenoff's troops entered Chita on the 6th, and were met with an enthusiastic welcome.

GERMAN MONUMENTS MELTED FOR WAR

Bronzes Of Schiller And Goethe Destroyed—Empress Ill With Fear

London, August 28.—The Munich Post reports that in accordance with an order issued by the military authorities 40 bronze statues, monuments and fountains in Munich are being melted for military purposes. The statues to Schiller and Goethe are among those to be destroyed.

EMPRESS ILL WITH FEAR

New York, August 30.—According to a message from the Hague, a Dutch lady has lately received a letter from a friend at the Potsdam Court stating that the German Empress has been troubled with severe headaches for more than a year. The fate of the ex-Tsar and Tsarina has extremely shocked the nerves of the German Empress and fear haunts her that she might share the fate of the deposed Empress of Russia if a revolution should be started in the fatherland.

The German Empress' case has become worse recently, this fear having been enhanced by the news that the ex-Tsar has been killed and the ex-Tsarina is persecuted. The reverses suffered by the German army in North France are also adding to the aches of the Empress' heart.

Nearing The End of The Tether

THOSE whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad, and it would seem that the carnival of terrorism and insensate outrages in which the Bolsheviki are at present indulging is the preliminary to the destruction, daily being brought nearer, of that cult in Russia. What is one to think of the detention of thirty-six British subjects and many French citizens holding official positions who have been arrested and threatened with death? There is apparently an orgy of excesses that constitutes a highly significant symptom.

Reports of indefensible outrages perpetrated by the Bolsheviki on French and British subjects received during the past few days have been supplemented by further advices received yesterday. A message from Petrograd states that it is officially announced that 512 persons have been shot up to the present as a reprisal for the murder of Uritski, the Bolshevik Minister of the Interior. The name of 121 hostages are published who will be shot in the event of any fresh attempt on the lives of the Bolshevik leaders. They include five Grand Dukes, two members of the former Kerensky Ministry and a number of prominent ex-officers. Thirty-four big land-owners and also the ex-Archimandrite of Moscow have been shot at Smorensk as a reprisal for the attack on Lenin.

The doings of the Bolsheviki in Russia are reminiscent of the worst days of the French Reign of Terror. These demonstrations on the part of the Bolsheviki and ebullitions of terrorism really are a sign of the weakness of the Bolshevik position and a growing consciousness on their part that their days are numbered. There is no class of people in Russia of any worth who can morally sanction the Bolshevik outrages on Allied subjects and officials, and it would appear to be the deliberate policy of the Bolsheviki to pick a quarrel with the Entente Allies by subjecting their nationals to intolerable indignities.

German telegrams state that Tchicherin, the Bolshevik Commissionary for Foreign Affairs, has sent an impudent reply to the note presented by the British Government, to the effect that the Soviet Government is prepared to exchange diplomats only if neutrals guarantee that Great Britain will grant the Bolshevik representative in London, Litvinoff, a safe-conduct to Russia, on which is contingent the release of Mr. Lockhart, British Consul-General at Moscow, and other British subjects in prison in Russia.

If the Bolsheviki have the firm determination to antagonise the Entente Powers, they could not do so more effectively than by employing their present methods. Not only are the Bolsheviki gratuitously insulting the Entente Allies but already there is a solid mass of Russian public opinion forming against the Bolsheviki, and the counter-revolutionary movement against the Bolsheviki is rapidly spreading despite the employment of the most drastic methods by the Bolshevik tyrants.

The Czecho-Slovak movement in Russia is now placed on something like an organised footing. With the systematic help of the Allies, the movement is destined to lead to a final Russian revival, and if the Soviet forces really propose, as reported, to resist the Allied armies, we fail to see how Germany can prevent a condition of things being brought about when she will once more have to fight on an Eastern front. During the last few months, the Bolsheviki by their own overt acts have done more to discredit themselves in the eyes not only of the world but of the best elements in Russia than any conceivable Allied propaganda could have done. The Russians are realising that a resumption of hostilities against Germany is infinitely preferable to subjection to a system of vassalage to Germany through the latter's handmaid—the Bolsheviki. Russia is nearing a crisis in her affairs, and the Bolsheviki the end of their tether.

Britain's Work In War

Great Britain's contribution to the success of the Allies was made public here yesterday, on the eve of the fourth anniversary of the United Kingdom's entrance upon the war, by the British Bureau of Information of the British War Mission.

The bureau which enumerates among other things the fact that Great Britain and her colonies have raised 7,500,000 soldiers, of whom 500,000 have been slain and 2,000,000 are wounded or missing. England, herself, it is said, has furnished 60 percent of the fighters and suffered 76 percent of the casualties.

British soldiers have fought on seventeen fronts in the past four years, including Belgium, France, Italy, Servia, Greece, Russia, Palestine, Mesopotamia, China and North, East, and West Africa.

The British expenditure of rifle ammunition per week is now sixty-five times greater than the average weekly expenditure during the first ten months of the struggle. The machine-guns output is thirty-nine times greater. The Ministry of Munitions now handles 50,000,000 articles a week and in addition to more than ninety arsenals. Great Britain has 5,046 Government-controlled factories, all working night and day on munitions and supplies.

The British Navy has trebled its personnel and doubled its fighting armament since entering the conflict. It and the merchant marine have transported overseas 13,000,000 men, 2,000,000 horses and mules, 500,000 cannon, gun carriages, and other vehicles, 25,000,000 tons of explosives, 51,000,000 tons of oil and fuel, and 130,000,000 tons of food and other stores.

The ill-omened word "kultur" comes in for a savage analysis. Professor von Seyden, in the first frenzy of the war, said: "The Germans are the elect people of the earth. They will accomplish their destiny, which is to rule the world and to guide all other nations for their common happiness."

The bureau answers von Seyden by presenting a table of the worst forms of crime committed in Germany and England during the ten years, 1897-1907, as follows:

	Germany.	England.
Murder	350	97
Incest	573	56
Rape	9,381	216
Unnatural crimes	841	290
Malicious and felonious wounding	172,153	1,262
Malicious damage to property	25,759	358
Arson	610	278
Total	209,667	2,557

"People of America," the author of the bureau's report says in conclusion, "you fathers and mothers, wives, sisters, and sweethearts of the men you have sent to France, I ask you to study that table. Kultur should be known by its results, and, if 'benighted' England can show such a case against 'enlightened' Germany, is it not worth four years, or, if need be, forty years of war to keep your country and ours clear of the virus of Kultur?"

A Babel of Slang

We were too insular before the war. Foreign tongues were not our strong point. But the army has grappled with the difficulty. Its grammar may be poor and we may have forgotten the French for "the pen of my grandmother," but our daily converse in mess is sprinkled with so-called French words.

"Whisky nahpoo" sums up the situation at once when Fortnum and Mason's case has failed to arrive.

We had just become experts at promener avec and such-like difficult verbs.

Then the Americans came and new phrases had to be adopted. We rose to the occasion.

"Guess we're 'stung' this time," says the major, as his partner puts down "dummy" without a single court card.

"Yes, I think we've got you 'trimmed,'" is the opponent's verdict, as he makes the small slam.

The late arrival at breakfast implores the waiter to "put a breeze behind" the eggs and bacon lest he be late for parade, and bids the padre "connect him" with the tea and sugar at once.

Our Allies follow our example. In response to "Bong soir, mam'selle," the Belgian maiden calls out "Cheerio." In fact, in time, say after the fifteenth battle of Ypres, each nation will have adopted its neighbor's slang, and we shall hear Kai Lung, of the Labor Corps, calling out: "My hat, old top; Ah Seng's wangled a Military Medal."—London Daily Press.

The Hard-Faced Bloke

"We were lined up just after marching into camp, and the O. C." said Tommy, "had finished reading out the rules and regulations. 'Now,' he said, looking along the line, 'I want a good, smart bugler.' Out stepped a dilapidated bloke. 'What!' said the Colonel, eyeing him up and down, 'are you a bugler?' 'Oh, bugler,' said the hard-faced bloke. 'I thought you said burglar'."

The Russian Problem And Its Solution

Forces Opposing Bolshevism

By Manuel Komroff

IV.

WE have already seen how the Russian army disintegrated. It seemed as though it had eaten itself out of existance. The Bolsheviki gained power not so much by their own strength, as through the weakness of the opposing parties. Their own strength lay in the rapid growth of industrial organisations.

While the army was degenerating the industries were organising into Industrial Unions. These industrial units were not content with industrial power alone but soon entered the political field. This they did by electing delegates to the Soviets. The Soviets, at the fall of the Provisional Government, became the State; the new social order.

At the start it seemed dreadful. Soviet members, who but a week before had worked as bench hands or mechanics, were now seeking political jobs. Petrograd seemed hungry for power. Labor leaders and agitators hounded their friends in the quest of power. Many did not sleep for fear or joy of awaking famous. All were thirsty for power, yet few had any idea or knowledge of government. In fact many of them admitted it, and were proud of the fact. I say this without malice, as I realised then that power carries a double-edged sword. It vanquishes the foe but also it slays the victor. One is more easily ruined by victories than by defeats. Napoleon died of too many victories and Germany will suffer the same fate. I always held this idea and even risked expressing it in Russia, but the only reply I received was that they (the Bolsheviki) would rather be governed by themselves, regardless of consequences, than by a state of opposition. But the thirst for power was evident in every move.

Now the Bolsheviki were not, in their actions, as revolutionary or as radical as many of us are taught to believe. One of their first acts was to separate the Church from the State. This, in England, France and America, had been done over a hundred years ago. Government control of industries now exists in all the warring countries. Confiscation of large estates is now being threatened in England; for the present, these estates are so severely taxed that holding them is unprofitable. The eighty percent profit tax of England is in a way a far more radical measure than any of those introduced by the Bolsheviki.

As there exists a great similarity between State acts in Russia and those in other countries, then where does our objection arise? Our main objection comes of course in the method used. Our reformers have been busy to keep abreast with the times and have stolen the thunder from the insurgents, much as the Progressive Party in America realised the public wants, when it included in its original platform, the eight hour day, workingman's compensation acts and old age pensions. Originally these were socialistic principles, but are now recognised in England, France and America. They were introduced in these countries as reform measures; in Russia, however, the same were established as Revolutionary acts. One must admit that only the method differed.

Now it will easily be seen that as the Bolsheviki believe in industrial representation as opposed to political, their greatest forces in opposition can come only from organised industry. As the vast majority of people in Russia are workers and peasants, and as the Bolsheviki refuse to recognise a middle or upper class because of the smallness of their numbers, the only serious opposition they can have would be from the working man.

Inequality is the distinguishing note of primitive society and equality the symbol of modern civilisation. To the Bolsheviki equality means the total eradication of class lines; though in a larger sense such a proposition is paradoxical, as equality does not exist as a natural force, and as a State measure, only equality of opportunity could be promised.

In the Bolsheviki soviets, internal friction could only arise from the Anarchists and Syndicalists. These are the two moral and industrial forces in Russia which are more radical than the Bolsheviki themselves.

The Anarchists

For a long time I could not believe that Prince Kropotkin was an Anarchist. The work "Anarchist," always called up into my mind a man, unkempt, in a red shirt, with a bomb bulging out of each pocket. I had known of Kropotkin, as the author of the splendid book called "Mutual Aid." Little realising its underlying doctrine, I was inclined to hail the book as more consistant with Christianity than the Bible itself. Surely its author could not be an Anarchist! Surely so good and gentle an old man could not desire to overthrow the State.

But I was mistaken. It took a long time for me to get rid of my original impression on the subject, and it was only by keeping an open mind, that I could eradicate my former opinion.

Mr. Kerensky offered Kropotkin, the leader of the Anarchist Communists, a portfolio in his Cabinet. Kerensky did not do this because of the Anarchists being a political force and requiring representation. They are not a political force. He did it because of the extreme intelligence of Kropotkin and because of the soundness of his theories. Several years ago, at a celebration given by Kropotkin's friends on his seventieth birthday in London, George Bernard Shaw addressed the audience. In his address he said, that after all he is sometimes of the opinion that he and his Fabian Socialists have been in error and that Kropotkin is more right in his principles.

The article on Anarchism in the Encyclopaedia Brittanica was written by Kropotkin and helps greatly to clear up any misunderstanding of the subject. As the Anarchists do not believe in political action and therefore do not enter into the government, they have been very little heard of, since the rise of the Bolsheviki. But their force is great, although their numbers are small, and they are not to be ignored. The terrorists in Moscow have caused the Bolsheviki a good deal of trouble, and our press have fallen into the error of calling them Anarchists, when in reality they have little in common.

As anti-militarism is one of the principles of Anarchy, the party was divided at the outbreak of war. Kropotkin, however, sided with the Allies. He wrote, at the time, that as he had been in France directly after her defeat (in the 1870 war) he realised the horrors a conquered nation must endure; that freedom would be set back a hundred years if German militarism were allowed to triumph. As Kropotkin has written, what is to may mind, that best history of the French Revolution, his words carry weight.

When the Bolsheviki came to power, Kropotkin, I have been told, proposed to Lenin and Trotsky the possibility of working out one of his theories of "small communes" as opposed to the centralised socialist state. But Lenin and Trotsky being State Socialists, more or less after the Karl Marx School, they could not fathom Kropotkin's idea. Besides this theory had always been a thorn in the side of Socialism (from the Marx vs. Bakunine controversy till today) and it was not likely that socalists having just obtained power, would put into operation any ideas but their own. Nevertheless this is a force that the Bolsheviki have to contend with.

Although Anarchism as a philosophy contained an ideal Utopia, still many Anarchists grew impatient, even before the war, and adopted their ideals to Syndicalism. Many of them called Syndicalism the working clothes of Anarchism and many retained their old theories and called themselves—"Anarcho-Syndicalists." Whether the "Anarcho-Syndicalists" are more far-seeing than the Bolsheviki is a question for debate. The fact remains that they have entered the Soviets and are causing much trouble there. As they have taken over the greater part of the industry of Russia they hold the power of the land. It is only by constant compromising, with the Syndicalists, that the Bolsheviki have managed to hold the power as long as they have.

The Syndicalists are one of the greatest powers in Russia today if not the greatest. Where did they come from? What do they want? Again we must diverge a moment from the main issues before us, in order to examine their philosophy and history. The understanding of syndicalism will help greatly to clear up the mysteries of Russia.

Syndicalism

Syndicalism is a working man's philosophy and method for realising the product of his labor, through the action and government of Trade Unions. It takes for granted that justice to the working class can only come from the organised efforts of the working class themselves.

Although the earliest efforts of Syndicalism occured with the Welsh miners and Italian glass blowers, when the workers in these trades took over the organisation of their own works, nevertheless, their efforts were too isolated to be considered as a movement. The movement really developed in France.

For many years labor has been discontented. Equality grew with civilisation. Governments became more and more the subject of criticism. Philosophers and novelists took up the theme, and many sided with the workers. Spinoza, for instance, compared the State to "a lion's den. In which all tracks point inward and none outward." Spencer wrote his "Right to Ignore the State." Disraeli, picked up the thread in his "Sybil;" a story dealing with the landlord and the serf, or capital and laborer. Zola continued it in his "Germinal."

France fell into a bad period. The Panama scandals, compromised officials and the Dreyfus revelations did not in the least help the lower classes to esteem the State. Great writers like Paul Adam, Elias Recluse, Octave Mirbeau and Anatole France used their beautiful pens to voice their discontent. Labor was organised and Syndicalism was born.

Syndicalism today holds in its hands several powerful weapons. No humoring, coaxing or reform plans have tempted them to part with any of their weapons. Their three main weapons are, the general strike, sabotage and taking over the industry into their own hands. The first two are destructive and would lead one to despair. In a larger sense it opposes the ideals of the honest craftsman's work. It risks honesty and can gain nothing but more wages or less hours of work. On the other hand specialisation and machinery in industry have also helped to destroy true craftsmanship, and the increase of living cost has always superceded the required increase of wages. In all countries there is a feeling of unrest. Capital and labor have become very unfriendly of late and in some countries it is only through patriotic reasons that they have in any way tolerated each other. However, let us not wander from the subject but go back to the Syndicalists in Russia.

With the return of the political exiles to Russia, came the ideas of French Syndicalism. As the rich had fled and the army was extremely busy at the front, there could be little or no opposition to extreme industrial unionisation. No general strike was necessary. The foremen of the factories that sides with the owners were immediately given the "wheelbarrow." They were seated in a wheelbarrow and politely wheeled outside. There was nothing to do, but to take over the factories, reorganise them, and finally share the profits. And this is exactly what was done.

Syndicalism originally was supposed to be free of any politics. It was not to meddle with the State. But as governments have always opposed the Syndicalists, in time, through mere contact, it is claimed, Syndicalism extended its industrial aims into political realms. Contray to Socialism it places Industrial Unionism first and politics second. This also happened in Russia.

Large factories sent delegates to the Soviets and as the political problems were uppermost, and as each delegate controlled a great number of votes, the temptation was great. Again we see the thirst for power.

With the Bolsheviki, they naturally had much ground in common, but in industrial questions, from time to time, friction occured. As the State controlled much of the raw products, especially those from mines not yet syndicalised, and also the means of transportation they held a check on these co-operations, and the Syndicalists would have to concede a bit in order to get materials, and await the time when their propaganda could syndicalise the mines and railroads. In many cases, however, they were discontented with the Bolshevik rule, and protested in the form of strikes and slip-shod labor.

The most intellegent criticism thrown against the Syndicalists comes from the pen of Bertrand Russel, when he points out that in the syndicalistic effort to remedy the evils of Capitalism, they themselves become a dreadful power, a power which grants them the chance to exert more tyrannical violence than Capitalism was ever guilty of. From the most recent developments of Syndicalism one is very much tempted to agree with him.

One is also inclined to think that the workers' salvation does not lie in politics.

In thinking of the industrial problems in Russia, let us not forget the condition of the land, its general disorganisation and the bleeding army. We will require them all, for our conclusions. Lets us fortify our minds with the real facts, that we may be better able to judge Russia is bleeding from every pore; and you may guess the sadness between the lines.

(Note: In his next article, Mr. Komroff will deal with "The Bolsheviki Experiments with High Tension Government," including their blunders, the peace with Germany, Siberia under the Bolsheviki, and the results of their experiments.)

In peace there's nothing so becomes a man
As modest stillness and humility:
But when the blast of war blows in our ears,
Then imitate the action of the tiger;
Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood,
Disguise fair nature with hard-favor'd rage;
Then lend the eye a terrible aspect;
Let it pry through the portage of the head
Like the brass cannon: let the brow o'erwhelm it
As fearfully as doth a galled rock
O'erhang and jutty his confounded base
Swilled with the wild and wasteful ocean.
Now set the teeth and stretch the nostril wide,
Hold hard the breath and bend up every spirit
To his full height.

Shakespeare put the above fine lines into the mouth of the hero-king, Henry V. when he was leading his soldiers against a well nigh impregnable fortress. Today something like a couple of million Americans are battering against a wall of flesh and blood in France; and in America millions of others are getting ready to help in the work "Over there."

Wherever you may go along that Pacific Coast, everyone seems to be in uniform. It is khaki here, khaki there, khaki everywhere; and blues here, blues there and blues all over the place. Yet nobody has the blues, everyone is confident of victory. There's a "rum-tum-tumming" everywhere. A whole nation seems to be standing like greyhounds in the slips straining upon the start. The great game's afoot, and the youth of America are following the spirit of George Washington.

The biggest thing I saw in America, in fact the biggest thing I have ever seen in my life, was Camp Lewis near Seattle. Before America came into the war this spot was just a wide sweeping prairie. There you could see a few cattle grazing; they seemed to be lost in the field's immensity. There perhaps a horseman; maybe even one of the famous cowboys in full rigout dancing the prairie on his bucking bronco in the sheer joy of life on the free waste.

Today everything is changed. The call of the trumpet awoke to life every force latent or otherwise in the land. In ninety days the prairie had become a town. Streets and streets, laid out upon a definite plan, sprang up. The huts, built of wood, were soon crowded with the lads of America. Today Camp Lewis claims to be one of the biggest and finest—if not the biggest and finest says the Camp Lewis "doughboy"—in America.

It is simply extraordinary how smoothly everything is running. There you may find fellows just ready to start away on the Great Adventure; others somewhere in the midst of an ardous training; and on top of all this; trainloads arrive daily of laughing youths dressed in the muftis of every tailor along the coast—and their first request is:

Put me into khaki as quickly as you can.
For that's the only suit to suit a man, man, man.

Everyone is catered for. There is no clashing of interests. The recruits soon pass through the early stages of marching, running, drilling, boxing, climbing, fighting in the open in trenches, fighting in the prepared streets and then—always with a song on the march—they make room for others as they make for Berlin.

Camp Lewis is so laid out that every kind of warfare—the advance in open formation of the infantry, the dash of the cavalry, or the trench tactics of an army—can be effectively carried out. Every kind of weapon may be seen and heard. There you can see heavy, cannon, your machine-gun and your rifle. There you can see old baseballers trying to forget how to pitch and learn how to bowl—cricket fashion—so that they may later make it hot and uncomfortable for Fritz with homemade bombs and hand grenades. The camp has its own fire brigade, its own efficient waterworks, its stores and shops, its theaters and gymnasiums. It provides concerts, sports and work for all.

Quite a feature of the camp is the singing class. Yes, there is a teacher who handles classes of five and six thousand voices, and with the aid of a band and a baton he gets some fine results. Regular, rollicking soldier songs are taught, and the doughboy is encouraged to sing on the march. Singing is a wonderful relief for tired feet.

"Over There" still holds pride of place as a swingy tune, but now that Irving Berlin has joined the army he seems to have caught on with his "They were all out of step but Jim" and "You've got to get up this morning." Both songs have the touch of humor and the ear tickling melody that makes a favorite.

Probably the second most popular instructor in Camp Lewis—the singing master is easily first—is Willie Ritchie, the clever little lightweight, who is teaching the boys to use their fists in case they find their arms out of reach. I noticed that the pupils were careful not to come within distance of Ritchie's 69 inch arm reach. Willie is the former champion at his weight.

To tell of any camp in the United States without mentioning the Y.M.C.A. would be to leave out one of its chief mainsprings. I'll tell you as nearly as I can just how one young corporal referred to that organisation. "Don't you say a word against the Y.M.C.A. to any soldier today. Believe me they are our best friends. I never had much truck with them before; they struck me as a lot of 'Sissies' who were always badgering the Almighty for something or other. Well they might have been that but they are not today. Those fellows are bully and they take care of you from the moment you step into camp until, as is often the case, you are knocked over. I don't care what it is you need; if it is good for you the Y.M.C.A. will provide it. Ask for a stamp, a pen, note paper, a cheery word, a bandage, a cup of water or a last prayer and the red triangle men will be near to provide it. Yes Sir, the soldier today says "God bless the Y.M.C.A."

Cotton Market Report

Messrs. J. Spunt and Co. in their Cotton Market Report for the week ending September 12 writes:

China Cotton.—We have had another week of small markets, the general range of prices being at the close about a tael higher than last week's quotations with the general tendency firm.

From reports to hand from the various districts in the Cotton belt one is led to deduce, so far, healthy crop results and while anything under or over general expectations would cause sharp temporary fluctuations the general course of the market for the next month or two will depend on the attitude of spinners both here and in Japan and the farmers as to the marketing of the crop no matter what its size may eventually be.

Meanwhile the market will continue to be governed by the daily crop reports which will be ruled by the weather map. Tone of the market: firm.

Liverpool:

Egyptian Cotton, F. G. F. Sakellaridis ..... 30.19d.
Price of Fine M. C. Bengal.. 29.50d.
Price of Good Middling .... 25.90d.
Price of Good Middling last reported ..... 25.94d.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

YOUR BLOOD WANTS PURIFYING

IF You are troubled with Eczema, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Boils, Sores, or Eruptions of any kind continually bursting through the skin.

IF You are suffering the aches and pains of Bad Legs, Blood Poison, Abscesses, Ulcers, Scrofulous and Ulcerated Sores, Glandular Swellings, &c.

IF You have that constant itching and inflammation of Piles.

IF You are in the grip of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Gout, &c.

All these are sure signs of clogging blood impurity, calling for immediate treatment through the blood, so don't waste your time and money on useless lotions and messy ointments which cannot get below the surface of the skin. What you want, and what you must have to be permanently cured, is a medicine that will thoroughly free the blood of the poisonous matter which alone is the true cause of all your suffering. Clarke's Blood Mixture is just such a medicine. It is composed of ingredients which quickly attack, overcome, and expel from the blood all impurities (from whatever cause arising), and by rendering it clean and pure, can be relied on to effect a complete and lasting cure.

THE TRUE VALUE of Clarke's Blood Mixture is certified by a remarkable collection of unsolicited testimonials from grateful patients of all classes—patients who have been cured after being given up as incurable—patients who have been cured after trying many other treatments without success.—See pamphlet round bottle.

Clarke's Blood Mixture is pleasant to take and guaranteed harmless to the most delicate constitution of either sex. Of all chemists and stores. REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

How To Subscribe To Liberty Loan

time of making application he may purchase bonds to any amount by making payment of 10 percent or more at the time of making the subscription and payments thereafter amounting to at least 10 percent per month. If bonds are purchased on this deferred scheme interest on the balance due will be charged at the rate of 4½ percent per annum for the first three months and 5 percent per annum for the remainder of the period during which payments are made.

The bonds will be delivered to the purchaser when final payment is made.

The initial payment on bonds purchased under this plan may be made in any of the ways specified above but at the time application is made the purchaser must fix exchange for the deferred payments and sign a tael note for the balance due on the purchase price.

As the banks must settle exchange forward on deferred payments, the rate offered for bonds purchased on this plan will not be so favorable as on cash purchases.

The present bond issue is for $6,000,000,000. The bonds will be in denominations of $50, $100, $500 and $1,000. They will bear interest at 4¼ percent payable semi-annually.

Bonds To Allies

It should be understood that money raised by the sale of Liberty Bonds is not used exclusively for the United States. A large part of it is loaned to the Allies. On June 30, 1918, these outstanding loans were as follows:

Belgium	$ 120,550,000
Cuba	15,000,000
France	1,685,000,000
Great Britain	3,170,000,000
Greece	15,790,000
Italy	650,000,000
Russia	325,000,000
Servia	9,000,000
Total	5,990,340,000

Since that date large additional advances have been made and a liberal proportion of the proceeds of the Fourth Liberty Loan will be turned over to the Allies.

For further information about Liberty Loan for advertising matter, etc., address any member of the Liberty Loan Committee, 26 Nanking Road, Shanghai.

NEW DICTIONARIES OUT

Three dictionaries based on the new international dictionary of the Merrian series have been published by the Chung Hwa Book Company, Ltd. U-Boat Shelters Hit In Raids On Bruges

Ostend Docks Also Heavily Bombed By British Naval Air Force

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, September 10.—The Admiralty issues the following communique:

The section of the Royal Air Force co-operating with the navy, between September 1 and 7, attacked the submarine shelters and workshops at Bruges on four occasions and obtained direct hits. It also attacked Ostend docks and the coastal motor-boat depot at Blankenberge with good results, large fires being started.

Our day-bombing machines dropped fourteen tons of bombs. One machine did not return.

In the fighting in the air ten hostile machines were brought down and nine driven down out of control, while three British machines were missing during the same period.
